Kimberly Nelson worked in higher education for nearly fifteen years, serving in senior administration, teaching in religious studies, coordinating international programs, and mentoring instructors. She holds master's degrees in theology, divinity, and intercultural studies, along with a bachelor's degree in business. Throughout her career, Kimberly has consulted with boards and senior leaders in education and community organizations to help craft their strategic plans, external communications, and academic curricula. As board member of a K-8 school in Boston, she chaired their education committee. Since 2019, she has overseen operations for Kramer Leadership, LLC. Kimberly and her husband David live on the campus of Catawba College in Salisbury, North Carolina.
