Robin Sansing is faculty member in the School of Social Work at the University of North Carolina, and a Licensed Clinical Social Worker (LCSW) with more than ten years of counseling experience. As a clinically trained professional, Robin provides life changing coaching, teaching, and training to a diverse population of clients. She has worked in a variety of professional settings including higher education institutions, healthcare, government agencies, nonprofit organizations, and private practice. Robin honed her coaching and training skills at the University of North Carolina, providing leadership coaching and professional training to the University's 12,000 faculty and staff, from senior management to front line employees. She is passionate about addressing diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) in all areas of her work. Most recently Robin created a nationally recognized online training to support people and organizations working with Trans identified students, and has facilitated dialogue among higher education leaders in support of DEI in academic institutions.

Robin also works with federal leaders, providing executive development at the Federal Executive Institute in Charlottesville, Virginia, where she facilitates the courses "Leading Up" and "Organizations: Leading Through Partnership, Power and Systems" for the flagship residency program, Leadership for a Democratic Society. Additionally, she has worked with middle and senior management at National Oceanic and Atmospheric Association (NOAA), helping 400+ middle and senior managers develop their leadership and management acumen. Her training and consulting work emphasizes practical knowledge, reflective learning, and specific actions that have application to real world situations. She incorporates experiential structured initiatives while integrating interaction, humor and encouragement.

In addition to executive coaching and consulting, Robin has a private psychotherapy practice in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, specializing in Cognitive Behavioral Therapy and applied Mindfulness. Robin holds a Bachelor's degree in Psychology from Prescott College, and a Master's degree in Social Work from North Carolina State University. She is certified to deliver the suite of 360 assessment instruments from the Center for Creative Leadership (CCL), the Myers Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI), and number of other personality and assessment instruments.

In her leisure time, Robin enjoys spending time with her family, hiking, camping, cycling, practicing yoga and meditation, and taking her dog, Kira, for long walks.
